The ecological picnic on the occasion of Children's Day at the primary school is a unique event that combines learning with fun, inspiring students to care for the natural environment. Organized by the eco-manager, its aim is to educate children about environmental protection, with particular emphasis on water and air, and to promote active time spent outdoors.

During the picnic, many attractions are planned. Children will have the opportunity to participate in art workshops, creating works from eco-friendly materials such as leaves, twigs, or recycled paper. Additionally, there will be outdoor games and activities where students will learn about ecology in an engaging way. The eco-manager will also conduct a presentation on water and air protection, discussing the importance of these resources and ways to protect them. Moreover, an interactive quiz will be organized to allow children to test their knowledge of ecology. There will also be integration activities. Students will be able to take part in ecological contests, such as a sorting race or a competition for the most beautiful insect-friendly garden. Adults will have the opportunity to obtain information about the possibilities of exchanging non-ecological heat sources, thermal modernization, or subsidy programs.
