Can cooking be tasty, budget-friendly, and waste-free? "Kids Don't Know This. Delicacies from Leftovers." is a culinary workshop for seniors that explores how to use every bit of food and reduce kitchen waste.

What's in store for participants?

- Ideas Bank: What to use instead of throwing away? – Participants will share their creative ways to reuse food scraps. Can potato peels become a crunchy snack? Can stale bread serve as the base for a new dish?
- Brainstorming session – "Waste-Free Recipes" – A discussion on how to create meals that use ingredients efficiently. A mix of traditional cooking techniques and modern zero-waste trends.
- Zero-waste cooking session – Selecting the best idea and preparing a dish that uses every part of the ingredients.

Why participate?

- Save money and protect the environment – Less food waste means lower costs and reduced environmental impact.
- Rediscover the flavors of the past – Older generations knew how to waste nothing. It's time to pass that wisdom on!
- The circular economy in the kitchen – Every ingredient has value when used creatively.

"Kids Don't Know This. Delicacies from Leftovers." reminds us that food waste was once a luxury few could afford. Today, reducing waste is a necessity—for both our planet and our wallets.

This event is organized as part of the LIFE project "Silesia. Blue Sky Restored."
